DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicants' amendment filed on 9/8/2006 has been fully considered and made of record.
2. Claims 11-34 have been withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected invention Group II, III and IV, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on 9/8/2006.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Seemann III, et al (US 5,958,325) in view of Lim (US 4,690,682).

As applied to claims 1 and 3, Seemann et al disclose a method of creating an internal channel of a fluid-ejection device, the method comprising: encapsulating (84, 86, Fig. 8) a channel core (82) in an element of the fluid-ejection as read feed groove (14) device that corresponds to the internal channel (see sequence Fig. 8 and 10).

However, Seemann does not disclose dissolving at least a portion of the channel core. Lim teaches dissolving at least a portion of the channel core (column 5, lines 35-

65+). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at this time the invention was made to have modified the method of Seemann by including dissolving of the channel core, as taught by Lim, to positively provide an improved method of controlling the pore size of microcapsule membrane (column 2, lines 67-68).

As applied to claim 2, Lim discloses wherein encapsulating a channel core in an element of the fluid-ejection device comprises encapsulating a water-soluble channel core in the element (column 5, lines 35-45+).

As applied to claim 4, Lim discloses the composite channel core comprises a soluble material and insoluble particles dispersed within the soluble material (column 5, lines 43-55).

As applied to claim 5, Seemann et al disclose the encapsulating (84, 86) a channel core (82) in an element of the fluid-ejection device comprises molding a material of the element around the channel core (see column 3, lines 61-65+).

As applied to claim 6, Seemann et al disclose encapsulating a channel core in an element of the fluid-ejection device comprises: disposing the channel core within a mold cavity; and injecting a material of the element into the mold cavity (column 4, lines 40-55).

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claim 7 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Reasons for Allowance: the prior art does not teach all of the limitations of the claimed invention including:

In claim 8:

- forming a channel core that corresponds to the internal channel from a soluble material;
- disposing the channel core within a mold cavity;
- a material of an element of the fluid-ejection device into the mold cavity so as to encapsulate the channel core.

6. Claims 8-10 are allowed.

Conclusion

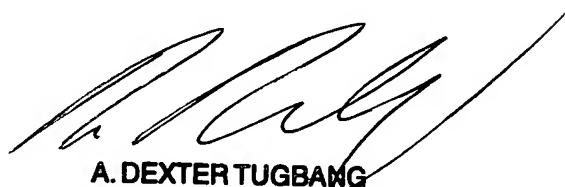

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
